

April 5, 2006

Walmart has already pushed several american bussinesses out of bussiness. Now they are going to take this destructive no mercy approach to the banks of america until they are gone too. Thay would threaten the existance of local banks driving them out of bussiness. They would control who would get loans and for what reasons. It just seems that a retailer of this size does not need to keep the others from entering the market place with a tactic such as this. Wal-mart would give loans that only have a positive impact on their direction of bussiness. One company should not have such a monopoly on our country. Why hasn't the goverment taken steps to diversify our economy. Soon we will need to ask wal-mart for too many catagories of everyday american life. In a land were americans were rewarded for hard work dedication we now only see our choices being taken away by a company that wants to own america by selling out americans with cheap wages, and poor healthcare.

Jason Owen